

KILLS MAN WHO TRIES EXTORTION

For Attempting to Blackmail Fellow-Countryman, Italian Shoots Him in Street.

"I'M GLAD I DID IT."

Said to Have Made Damaging Admissions and Exclaimed: "I Never Meant to Kill Them" While Excited.

Salvatore Vincenzo, a foreman in the Morse Iron Works, Brooklyn, shot and killed Vincenzo Cencello, a ship caulker, in the street, at Van Brunt and Hamilton avenues, Brooklyn, this morning. He put six bullets into him.

So far as the police have been able to learn, the murder was the result of Cencello's attempt to extort money from Vincenzo. The dead man had a bad reputation in the Italian colony in President street, and is said to have lived largely off money which he got from his female companion and from those whom he frightened into paying him part of their earnings. He only worked as a ship caulker when he found it necessary.

Bears Good Reputation.
Vincenzo bears a good reputation. He has the confidence of his employers and is said to have saved considerable money. He lives at No. 40 President street.

The two men met a little after 4 o'clock. Cencello, according to Vincenzo's story, had asked him for $5 several times before, threatening to kill him if he did not get it. This morning he made the same request. Vincenzo refused to let him have it. With that Cencello drew his revolver.

Vincenzo was ready for the move, and grappled with him. In the struggle, Vincenzo succeeded in getting the revolver from his opponent, and then he began firing. At the second shot, Cencello began to run. He dodged into the back room of a saloon, with his countryman at his heels, still shooting. In the saloon Cencello fell to the floor. Vincenzo fired his sixth shot into the man's body as he lay in the saloon.

Roundsman Hayes heard the fusillade and came into the saloon. He arrested Vincenzo and took him to the police station. Here he did not hesitate to say that he had killed the man and was glad of it.

Glad He Killed Him.
"I killed him," he said, "and I did a good job. You ought to give me a badge for it." He was no good. He robbed every one who would stand for it. On Sunday morning, Monday and Tuesday he demanded $5 of me and said he would kill me if he didn't get it. I didn't owe him anything, but that's the way he made his living.

"Today when he met me he again asked for the money and drew his pistol. So I took it away from him and killed him. He won't try to rob any one else."

RICH WOMAN AIDS CHESTNUT VENDER

Mrs. Louisa Lehman Prefers Charges Against a Policeman Who Beat a Poor, Inoffensive Italian.

As a result of an assault by Policeman John Roberts on an Italian peddler on Sixth avenue, near Nineteenth street, Mrs. Louisa Lehman, wife of a wealthy business man, living at No. 90 West End avenue, preferred charges against the officer before Inspector Brooks today. She called at his office in Police Headquarters this morning. Mrs. Lehman says that when she remonstrated with the policeman he threatened to arrest her. Mr. Lehman has become interested in the matter, and will insist that Commissioner Partridge investigate his wife's complaint.

The Italian was the proprietor of a chestnut stand. The policeman was passing the corner when he noticed the peddler, and after a few words spoken so low that no one near could understand him he pitched into the Italian, and after kicking over the stand proceeded to punch his victim till his features were almost obliterated.

Being a witness to the assault, Mrs. Lehman intervened, and the officer, as to his reasons for assaulting the peddler, she says that the treatment she received from the officer was far from courteous. She stated that after the assault had been committed she was one of a group of women who stood about the injured Italian taking pity on him, when the policeman, in response to her question as to why the man was not placed under arrest without the necessity of a hearing, stated that he would place both the Italian and his interrogator under arrest. The Italian was arrested.

Several women who were present at the time will also testify against Policeman Roberts tomorrow when the matter comes up for a hearing. The stand which the Italian conducted was a total wreck, and his stock in trade was a complete loss after the assault.

MEXICO AND GERMANY AT THE WOMEN'S SHOW AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.

It is the claim of William Arbutus Brady, manager of the Women's Exhibition at Madison Square Garden, that not in modern times has such a diversified aggregation of types of women been gathered under one roof, and there is little ground to combat the assertion.

A two hours' tour of the Garden will reveal to the investigator as many typical types as a tour of the world could show.

SISTER'S UNTRUTH TO SAVE BROTHER.
Pretty Florence Schrieber Detected in Her Attempt in Court to Falsify About Accused Boy's Age.

Fearing that her brother, Edward, would be sent to prison for the theft of a wrench, Florence Schrieber, twenty-one, a pretty stenographer, living at Ravenswood, L. I., falsely swore to Magistrate Zeller, in the Harlem Court this morning, that the boy was but fourteen years old.

Young Schrieber had said he was eighteen. He and two boys, Charles Bajart, fourteen, of No. 145 Amsterdam avenue, and William Donovan, fifteen, of No. 72 Old Broadway, had been arrested last night on the complaint of Hugh Peterson, of Lawrence street and Amsterdam avenue, a plumber. The two younger boys had been sent to the Children's Court and Schrieber was arraigned before Magistrate Zeller in the Harlem Court. Each of the boys had accused the others, but a pawn ticket for the wrench was found on Schrieber.

When the case was reached Florence Schrieber stepped forward and told the Magistrate her brother was but fourteen.

"He looks older than that," said the Magistrate suspiciously. "When was he born?"

"I don't know," said the girl hesitatingly.

Magistrate Zeller did not like her manner. To one of the court officers he said: "Go to the Board of Health and find out how old this boy really is."

Then the girl broke down and cried: "Your Honor, my brother is eighteen years old. I didn't mean to lie, but I thought I could save him from being sent to prison if I said he was but fourteen. Mother told me to say so."

"You have done a very wicked thing and I think I shall have to punish you," said the Magistrate.

After lecturing her severely, Magistrate Zeller told the girl she might go. Edward Schrieber was held for further examination to-morrow morning.
